Charges in teen stabbing

CRIME. Five people, some of them teenagers, were arrested after a 17-year-old was stabbed near Mountain Avenue and Salter Street on Saturday. Police say the 17-year-old was waiting for a bus when a group approached him. After heated words, the group allegedly began to beat up the teen. Police say someone then produced a knife and the teen was stabbed. Aaron Dean Laquette, 19, Cody Henry Bousquet, 20, Carlson Christopher Whiteway, 19, Jordan Lee Fisher, 20, and a 13-year-old boy, all from Winnipeg, are charged with aggravated assault and possession of a weapon.

Tentative deal reached

BRISTOL. Staff at Bristol Aerospace may be heading back to work. About 400 members of the Canadian Auto Workers, Local 3005, walked off the job April 1 after a collective agreement proposed by the company sought to reduce pension benefits. The new deal would not see retired workers lose their benefits, a union spokesman said.

Workers will vote on the deal today and could be back at work tomorrow.

You can't have unity without community.

And a sense of community was readily apparent as thousands rallied at the Manitoba legislative grounds and paraded down Broadway yesterday to spread a colourful message of peace, love and tolerance.

Winnipeg Pride Day — the annual celebration of gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgendered, two-spirited and queer peoples in Manitoba — went off without a hitch, given a boost after the threat of rain vanished and the sun brightened the day.

The atmosphere, however, was nothing short of gleeful. Festivities got underway just after 11 a.m., and were punctuated by ABBA singalongs led by Winnipeg's Rainbow Harmony Project Choir.

Conservative MP Shelly Glover and MLA Dr. Jon Gerrard were among those who attended, with Gerrard leading a procession of Manitoba Liberals down Broadway to The Forks.

The event capped Pride Winnipeg's 10-day-long festival, which started on May 28.

Desperately seeking tickets

The NHL is returning. Season tickets sold out in 17 minutes. And the return of the Jets (or Whiteout, or whatever they're going to be called) has spawned a number of desperate and not-so-serious ads on free classifieds websites such as Kijiji.ca.

One couple posted a picture of their baby son with the title: "Doesn't he deserve to experience Jets games?" And several people claimed to be in the doghouse and either selling their tickets for a massive markup or willing to pay outrageous prices.

Others offered incentives to people to part with their tickets, including one guy willing to throw in a $300 gift certificate for The Keg if he could buy a half-season's worth, and another fellow willing to give up his firstborn (we hope he's kidding).

Still, others posted ads admonishing scalpers for selling their tickets for more than they're worth.

Some of our favourites:

• "Hi, I am 33-year-old single white male. I would consider myself to be good-looking. Looking for a hot girl to be my date for the first NHL game back in Winnipeg! You will have to pay face value for the ticket since I am good looking and not desperate."

• "Wanted: Jets ticket to home opener. Willing to pay $20 and give you a foot rub. If you buy me a beer, I'll take off my shirt and paint my stomach white. If you buy me two beers, I'll paint my toenails blue and shake my pompoms. Sorry, bra stays on. Unless you buy me three beers and I don't have to pay."

• "People who r marking up the price on here to a crazy amount are ass— and not true hockey fans. If u had any character u would sell to family or friends who lost out and would do anything for tickets. AT A FAIR PRICE.!!!"

• "Drive to 13 didn't work for me. I would be interested in sharing season tickets or buying tickets for games! Please, please, my son is 13 years old and is still crying! Please help!"

• "Inebriated Dog Sitting Service. Owner/Operator: 40-year-old volleyball player. Will work for free. Unavailable on all Blue Bomber home games and NHL playoff games. Her love for animals is matched only by her love for a good party." ELISHA DACEY

'Stop Harper' stunt wows

▶ Page puts job on the line in a silent call for Canadians to think twice about the Conservatives ▶ Filmmaker Michael Moore salutes shocking protest

A high-profile American activist has become a cheerleader of the Senate page who lost her job for her stunning protest against Prime Minister Stephen Harper.

Michael Moore has posted a giant photo on his website of 21-year-old Brigette DePape holding up a "Stop Harper" sign in the Senate chamber during Friday's throne speech.

Moore has also shared a link to a news story describing DePape's stunt, calling for U.S. students to "take note."

In an interview yesterday, DePape told The Canadian Press she's excited her protest has attracted attention from a high-profile activist like Moore.

The University of Ottawa graduate was fired from her job for the move and was criticized by many Parliamentarians who suggested it was disrespectful.

But DePape said she has no regrets about the incident and remains convinced the best way to stop the Harper government is through protests like the one she staged.

"I really think it's only through inappropriate action that you can challenge the status quo and have real change," she said, adding that she's been overwhelmed by positive feedback from Canadians. "It's been really inspiring."

DePape said she initially joined the Senate page program to learn more about politics, but became convinced that the Conservative government's agenda was disastrous on everything from the environment to social programs.

DePape stood in the Senate chamber for about 20 seconds before she was ushered out by security.

20 dead in border clash

Israeli troops battle pro-Palestinian protesters along Syrian border
Marchers organized on Facebook

Israeli troops battled hundreds of pro-Palestinian protesters who tried to burst across Syria's frontier with the Golan Heights yesterday, killing a reported 20 people and wounding scores more in the second outbreak of deadly violence in the border area in less than a month.

The clashes, marking the anniversary of the Arab defeat in the 1967 Mideast war, drew Israeli accusations that Syria was orchestrating the violence to shift attention away from a bloody crackdown on opposition protests at home. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Two sides

The recent protests have drawn attention to the plight of Palestinian refugees who fled or were expelled from their homes during Israel's war of independence in 1948.

- The original refugees, and their descendants, now number several million, and they demand "the right to return" to the families' former properties.
- Israel opposes the return of these people, saying it would spell the end of the country as a Jewish state.

E. coli outbreak linked to Germany

The terrifying E. coli outbreak in Europe appears to have been caused by vegetable sprouts grown in Germany, an agriculture official said yesterday as the toll climbed to at least 22 dead and more than 2,200 sickened.

Preliminary tests found that bean sprouts and other sprout varieties from an organic farm in the Uelzen area, between the northern cities of Hamburg and Hannover, could be connected to infected people in five German states, Lower Saxony Agriculture Minister Gert Lindemann said.

Report claims feds hoarding copyrights

In 2009, more than 2,100 patents and copyrights by outside contracts held by government departments

Departments and agencies are hoarding hundreds of patents and copyrights, violating the federal government's rules on intellectual property, says a new report.

For more than 10 years, federal policy has been to assign contractors the rights to any intellectual property produced during their work for departments and agencies. For example, a software company that writes a computer program under a federal contract can retain the copyright and sell the program. The policy, implemented in 2000, says only in exceptional circumstances should Ottawa retain a patent or copyright — largely because the private sector is best positioned to exploit it commercially.

A new report found that too many patents and other intellectual properties are winding up in government hands. In 2009, 59 per cent of the intellectual property generated by outside contracts was snapped up by government departments.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Protocol

- The 2011 report found few departments were applying to the Treasury Board to allow them to retain patents or copyrights.
- It says Canadian rules are being widely ignored.
- It also criticized the Treasury Board and Industry Canada for failing to monitor departments' adherence to the policy.

Flaherty plans to stay the course

In a way, it will go down as the ultimate budget leak.

When Finance Minister Jim Flaherty stands up in the House of Commons today to deliver the government's fiscal plan for the upcoming year, Canadians could be forgiven for thinking they've heard it before.

They have. As Flaherty has repeatedly said since his party won its first majority on May 2, he intends to bring back essentially the same document he unveiled two months ago and that all three opposition parties rejected.

Taking what remains of the drama out of the process, Flaherty has also unveiled the two major changes he does intend to bring in — setting aside about $2.2 billion for Quebec's adoption of the harmonized sales tax, and beginning the process of phasing out political party financing.

"Basically this is the March 22 budget with a couple of additions from the platform," the minister said recently. Officials have also let it be known there will be few surprises, if any, reducing the usual all-day lock-up for reporters to a slim two hours.

Move over, Oxford, there's a new school in town

A group of prominent British academics said yesterday they are starting a private university in London to rival the country's elite institutions in Oxford and Cambridge.

The New College of the Humanities will be led by AC Grayling, a renowned philosophy professor, and the faculty will include Richard Dawkins, an evolutionary biologist and successful author, economics professor and writer Niall Ferguson, and other prominent educators.

It will be a relatively small university boasting at least one teacher for every 10 students and offering one-to-one tutorials and extensive contact between teachers and students, officials said.

In a message posted yesterday on the new university's website, Grayling said graduates would be ready to make "an immediate contribution in business, government, media or the arts."

He also said college staff would help arrange internships.

Greyling said that "a significant number" of scholarships would be awarded.

The new college has started accepting admissions applications, with classes expected to begin in October 2012.

CHALLENGE IS SAFER BIKE RIDERS

URBAN COMPASS

COLIN FAST
METRO WINNIPEG

It's said that you never forget how to ride a bike. But what if you didn't really know how to do it right in the first place?

With the annual Commuter Challenge kicking off today, hundreds of inexperienced cyclists will be hitting the road for their trip to work. Unfortunately, odds are that some of them will literally be hitting the road as well, due to poor riding skills.

"Most people know how to balance a bike, but they don't really know how to ride it properly," said Dave Ellmore, a certified bike safety instructor and director of safety and education for local cycling advocacy group Bike to the Future.

According to Ellmore, some of the most common mistakes cyclists make are thinking they're allowed to pass a line of stopped cars along the right (it's illegal, and makes motorists angry), riding along sidewalks because they perceive it's safer (it's not, and it's also illegal), and riding as close as possible to the edge of the road (it's unsafe and reduces your visibility).

"... hundreds of inexperienced cyclists will be hitting the road for their trip to work."

While many cyclists aren't yet familiar with even basic riding techniques, the three levels of government have spent millions over the past few years installing new cycling infrastructure like bikeways, sharrows and traffic calming circles across Winnipeg.

Bike to the Future welcomes these investments, but Ellmore said the group would like to see a corresponding commitment to cyclist education. To that end, it has approached the city, province and Manitoba Public Insurance to support offering the Canbike program in this province.

Developed by the Canadian Cycling Association, Canbike is a nationally standardized series of bike safety courses, similar to driver's education. The program is offered extensively in other Canadian centres, such as Toronto, where the city runs dozens of Canbike courses each summer.

For now, though, local options are scarce. MPI does run "bike rodeos" for young children, and Bike to the Future was able to offer a few bike safety short-courses through the city's Leisure Guide this spring, but Ellmore said it's not nearly enough to reach the growing number of local cyclists.

As governments continue to invest in expanding our cycling network and encouraging more people to hop on a bike, they would be well-advised to pedal together with groups like Bike to the Future to ensure our roads are safe for all users.

Interested cyclists can find safe riding advice on the Bike to the Future website (biketothefuture.org) or can register for this week's Commuter Challenge at the Green Action Centre (www.greenactioncentre.ca.)

But we know Canada is full of compassionate individuals, inspiring projects and stories worth celebrating. Here is just one.

"It takes a village to raise a child" may be an old adage, but at the Bonnycastle Family Centre, parents are bringing it back to life.

"It's a place for families to connect, network with other parents."

"It's a place for families to connect, network with other parents, even have parenting styles modelled to them," founder Karen Velthuys said. "It started from the grassroots and has been sustained in the community for 10 years."

Now they are taking the shirt off his back

Thousands of buyers vied for items that once belonged to convicted swindler Bernard Madoff, with 14 pairs of his underwear going for $200 US and a photograph of a naked rear end selling for $4,600.

The Miami Herald reported the U.S. Marshals Service held the auction Saturday in Miami Beach.

Some bidders, like Mike Burd of Long Island, N.Y., planned to resell the goods for profit on eBay. Others, like North Miami online retailer Rich Kroll, simply wanted a piece of history.

The mostly household goods brought in more than $400,000, which will go toward compensating victims of Madoff's $65-billion Ponzi scheme. Madoff pleaded guilty and is serving a 150-year prison sentence.

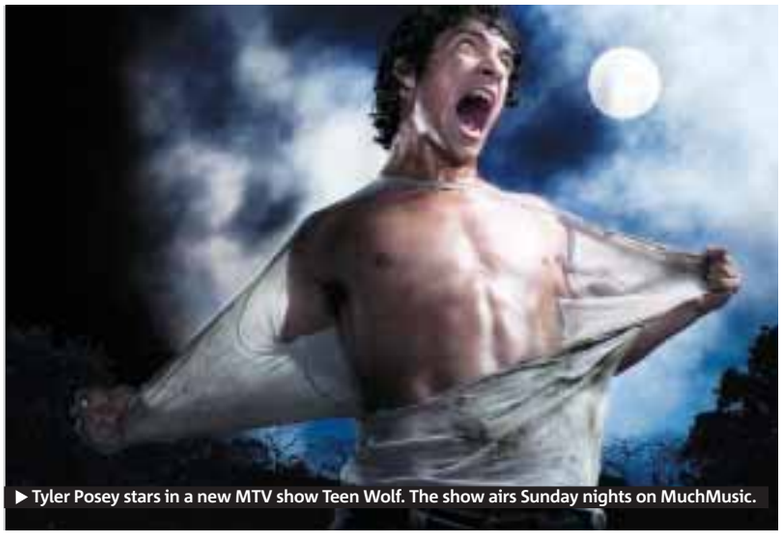
Who's afraid of the big bad wolf?

- 19-year-old Tyler Posey gets some big claws and fangs for his role in Teen Wolf
- TV show has little in common with the original Michael J. Fox film from the 1980s

NED EHRBAR
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS IN HOLLYWOOD



▶ Tyler Posey stars in a new MTV show Teen Wolf. The show airs Sunday nights on MuchMusic.

There's just something about Tyler Posey that makes people think of werewolves. Not only is he leading MTV's new, darker series version of Teen Wolf, but 19-year-old California native was also considered for the role of shape-changing Jacob Black in the Twilight films — a role that eventually went to Taylor Lautner.

"I guess, according to MTV, I have a lupine look, which I had no idea what that meant. Does anyone know what that means?" Posey asks, before being given the definition. "Wolf-like? I had no idea what that meant. But yeah, I have a 'lupine' look." Which is not to say Posey is a particularly hirsute young man. "I shaved 18 days ago," he jokes. "I grow no hair. I just look like a wolf. Dark and handsome."

In fact, if he could take on any of his werewolf alter-ego's abilities, it wouldn't be the increased speed, strength or senses, he admits. "I'd like to grow hair. On my face," he says. "My werewolf grows big, crazy muttonchops. But he grows it and then it just goes away. That's the power I want. I can just grow whatever I want and bring it in whenever I want. Why not?"

Posey is quick to point out this Teen Wolf doesn't have a lot in common with the original film — which came out before Posey and most of its target audience were born — including how his character looks during a full moon.

"The big movie I really looked at for inspiration was Wolf with Jack Nicholson, because it's totally our genre," he says. "It's funny, there's romance in it, and his wolf looks a lot more like ours. It's more smooth and … was it sexy? I don't want to call Jack Nicholson sexy. But he is."

While other actors might be canceling their Internet service to avoid reading scathing message board rants — which Teen Wolf was generating long before its premiere — Posey refuses to hide.

"I like hearing reviews, I like hearing what people have to say," he says. "I want to keep track of the show, see what people think. Nothing deters me. If people say bad reviews, it's just like, I like the show. That's what matters, right?"

Besides, Posey knows he has supporters, since he interacts with them as much as possible. "I'm Twittering like crazy," he says. "I'm pretty good with trying to stay in contact with my fans. Like, every single person that talks to me I try to message back. That's one of my favourite things about Twitter, just being so personal with your fans. I think it's so cool. I don't know, I just like it. I feel like I can change the world. And I'm going to, damn it, one tweet at a time."

Cameron Diaz and Alex Rodriguez have called it quits, according to Perez Hilton, and Diaz is reportedly none too thrilled about it.

"They've broken up," a source says. "[Cameron is] hurt and betrayed, because she tried so hard to please him. She went overboard." And according to Page Six, Rodriguez was the one who instigated the split, telling Diaz "that he needs to focus on baseball and that's all there is to it," according to a source. "He thought she would be an easy girlfriend. But then she pushed for more of a commitment, and he told her to cool it." METRO

Pay up: Cheryl

Cheryl Cole's dismissal from the U.S. X Factor has reportedly left her in a face-off with the show's production company, Fremantle Media.

The dispute is over pay for the four days of work she completed, according to the Hollywood Reporter.

The company is looking to avoid ponying up the cash without violating Cole's contract.

"They don't want to pay her," a source says. "It's a chess match."

Fremantle is reportedly now asking Cole to apply for a U.S. visa — and Cole is reportedly set to comply. METRO

LaBeouf weighs in on Megan's foxiness

Shia LaBeouf says former Transformers co-star Megan Fox never really had time to get comfortable with the sex symbol status that was thrust upon her thanks to their blockbuster franchise.

"This is a girl who was taken from complete obscurity and placed in a sex-driven role in front of the whole world and told she was the sexiest woman in America," he tells the L.A. Times. LaBeouf admits series director Michael Bay may not have helped matters: "Megan developed this Spice Girl strength, this woman-empowerment [stuff] that made her feel awkward about her involvement with Michael, who some people think is a very lascivious filmmaker, the way he films women," he says. "The one thing Mike lacks is tact. There's no time for, 'I would like you to just arch your back 70 degrees.'" METRO

Kids on Facebook?

Mark Zuckerberg recently said, if he could, he'd open up the site to children under 13 Zack Whittaker, a criminologist and blogger for iGeneration, weighs in on the controversy

You wrote that you're against children on Facebook. Why is that site different from MySpace or MSN messenger, where kids can befriend random screen names?
Well, as Facebook draws in over 500 million users worldwide, it is natural for the site to attract the most attention. While others sites should not bask in the heat Facebook feels with pressure from privacy advocacy groups, there is no difference between a seemingly random screen name on MSN/Windows Live and using a fake name on Facebook. Identity goes further than simply the name we use or details we hand over.

As a criminologist, what do you feel is the most effective way to stop predators? Or to catch them?
This insidious relationship we have with online predatory behaviour is ubiquitous across sites involving children. Online sex offenders should be restricted from using social networks, but this simply prevents online reoffending. The balance should be maintained between children's access to offenders as well as offenders' access to children. A bipartite arrangement should be enforced, with children of a certain age — say 13 and upwards, as Facebook has as its current policy — are allowed on social networking sites, but with a restricted panel of privacy settings to prevent automatic disclosure of a child's information.

But how do we institute laws without violating privacy?
It is an immensely difficult balance to strike. Unfortunately, it is only for criminologists and sociologists to debate, and for respective parliaments, assemblies, congresses and legislators alike to implement. Privacy should be the foremost point for the minds of those constructing laws. If freedom of expression and speech can align with privacy — something the United States holds better than its British cousins — then we are at least one step in the right direction.

Should there be stricter guidelines for opening up a social media account?
Yes, in that it would prevent spam accounts from being created — formed from fake names that water down the concentrated social experience for the rest of users. Equally no, in that the less information there is about users online, the less chance that social media companies can misuse private user information, as Facebook has shown to do before.

UNCORKING TRUTHS BEHIND ORGANIC WINE

What's the difference between organic wine and conventional wine? Peter of Vancouver

QUEEN OF GREEN

LINDSAY COULTER
GREEN@METRONEWS.CA

Wineries that produce certified organic wine cannot use toxic pesticides, herbicides or synthetic fertilizers to grow grapes. An organic vineyard will fertilize crops with compost, compost teas, green manure and cover crops. Instead of herbicides, they rely on mechanical weeding, mowing around the vines, mulching and companion planting. To avoid the use of insecticides to control cutworms, organic practices include grazing chickens under the vines or picking cutworms off the leaves one by one.

Certified organic wine doesn't use any genetically modified organisms (GMOs) either. GMO yeast, for example, is allowed in conventional wines. And when it comes to other additives, certified organic wines don't contain sulphites. However, wine labelled "Made with organically grown grapes" may have sulphur dioxide. The latter might also be processed using the same equipment and in the same facility as conventional wine.

So among organic wines, bottles with a third-party certified organic label would meet the highest standards.

You also come across biodynamic wines. Biodynamic farming techniques use a vineyard's natural resources to cultivate grapes without pesticides, fungicides, herbicides, synthetic fertilizers or growth stimulants.

A certified biodynamic vineyard often meets or exceeds the standards and regulations for organic-certified farming.

Some wineries also take land stewardship and living in harmony with wildlife seriously.

They educate workers, asking them not to kill native snake species, which are often rare or endangered.

They might install snake barrier fencing and incorporate worker safety training.

Others restore native habitats through planting native shrubs, wildflowers and grasses or account for losing some of their harvest to local wildlife like bears.

When he first came to Toronto from Malaysia with his wife and young family, Royson was told "You have a degree — so what?"

He pumped gas, repaired clocks and worked at Future Shop. Within three months Royson moved into management and eight years later found himself being courted by Sammy Chiu of Samtack Inc. to take his company public.

After Royson's arrival in the corner office, Samtack's revenue soared from 20 million a year to over 400 million worldwide. Today 97 per cent of all Samtack employees are new immigrants.

Canucks halfway to prize

Series heads to Boston, where Bruins are 7-3 in 2011 playoffs

CANUCKS | BRUINS

Time: 8 p.m.
TV: CBC

The Vancouver Canucks didn't embark on this particular business trip with celebrating on their minds.

Halfway home to the Stanley Cup, the team landed in Boston with the opportunity to claim its first ever championship before getting on another plane. The mere prospect of that had people celebrating on the streets of Vancouver long into yesterday morning, but the enthusiasm didn't rub off on the players who will be charged with getting the job done.

"It's been tight, really close games," forward Henrik Sedin said last night. "Both could have gone either way. We know that we have to play better.

"They're a good team and we've got a lot of respect for those guys."

With Game 3 looming at what promises to be an amped-up TD Garden tonight, the Canucks are expecting to see a different Bruins team than the one they beat twice at Rogers Arena.

An old adage suggests a playoff series isn't over until a team has lost on home ice. The Vancouver players are willing to take it even further after watching Chicago erase a 3-0 deficit in the first round and force overtime in Game 7.

"If there's anything this playoffs have taught is, it's that you can't (get ahead of yourself)," said forward Jannik Hansen. "You've seen how many series have been up and you think, 'Oh now the team is going to close it out,' and suddenly the other team has been back. We've had that experience ourselves."

The Canucks are coming across as extremely poised in the midst of an emotional time. They're riding a wave of positivity after a Game 1 victory on a goal by Raffi Torres with 18.5 seconds to play before pulling Game 2 out just 11 seconds into overtime on an Alex Burrows wraparound.

It's put a long-awaited championship just outside of their grasp.

"I think the players have to be focused on the task at hand," said Canucks coach Alain Vigneault.

"If you are focused on the task and what you need to do to perform well, then your emotions are the right ones, your intensity is the right intensity and you can go out there and execute."

The series is starting to see some bad blood develop between the teams. Vigneault referred yesterday to a Rich Peverley slash on Kevin Bieksa as a "cheap-shot" that "you don't want to see in the game."

▶ Rafael Nadal returns the ball to Roger Federer yesterday.

Nadal bests Federer in Open final

Spanish star matches Borg with his 6th French Open win

Regardless of the setting or the surface, Rafael Nadal confounds Roger Federer the way no other man can.

Put the two greats of the game on opposite ends of a court in a Grand Slam final — particularly at Roland Garros, on the red clay that Nadal rules — and the one-sided nature of the rivalry grows even more pronounced.

Grinding along the baseline, using every inch of his wingspan to extend points, whipping fearsome forehands this way and that, Nadal flummoxed Federer yet again yesterday in a riveting, highlight-filled match, beating him 7-5, 7-6 (3), 5-7, 6-1 for a record-tying sixth French Open championship and 10th major title overall.

"He plays better against the better ones, and that's what he showed today," said Federer, owner of 16 Grand Slam trophies. "He's a great champion, on clay, especially."

There's no question that Nadal is as good as it gets in Paris — 45-1 for his career, and the same number of titles there as Bjorn Borg — but the Spaniard already also has shown that he is much more than the King of Clay. And yesterday's victory only will raise more questions about whether Federer truly deserves to be called the Greatest of All Time if he is not even the Greatest of Right Now.

MICHEL EULER/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"I was able to play my best when I needed my best. For that reason, today I am here with the trophy."
RAFAEL NADAL

Nadal leads their head-to-head series 17-8. That includes a 6-2 advantage in Grand Slam finals and a 5-0 edge at the French Open (in the 2005 semifinals, and the 2006, 2007, 2008 and 2011 finals).

When a reporter recited those numbers and asked for an assessment, Nadal replied: "Well, it means I can play well, too.

"When you talk about these statistics, when you try and make these comparisons, really it's not very interesting to me," continued Nadal, who would have ceded the No. 1 ranking to Novak Djokovic with a loss yesterday. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Thrashers GM won't make the trip north

Rick Dudley won't be part of the NHL's return to Winnipeg.

True North Sports and Entertainment confirmed yesterday that it will not retain Dudley's services as general manager when the Atlanta Thrashers relocate to the Manitoba capital next season.

The company purchased the Thrashers earlier this week and has already met its goal of selling 13,000 season tickets.

BRUCE BENNETT/GETTY IMAGES

▶ Rick Dudley

Dudley, who was named the Thrashers' GM in April 2010, had four years remaining on his contract.

"After meeting with Rick Dudley this week, we have decided to go in another direction with the position of general manager of our team," True North chairman Mark Chipman said in a release. "We informed Rick of our decision late (Saturday) afternoon, and thanked him for his work in building a foundation and future for this team."

Craig Heisinger, the general manager of the American Hockey League's Manitoba Moose, is expected to be a key piece of the NHL club's front office. When sale of the team was announced, Chipman said Heisinger would play a "significant role."

Chicago Blackhawks assistant general manager Kevin Cheveldayoff has also been linked to the club.

True North did not say who will be in attendance on the team's behalf at the NHL's GM meetings in Boston on Wednesday.

Bruins sticking to their game plan

After making the long trip home yesterday, the Boston Bruins didn't walk off the plane with a long list of changes or adjustments planned.

Instead, their strategy for getting back into the Stanley Cup final against the Vancouver Canucks was to stick with what got them here. Facing a virtual must-win Game 3 tonight, the Bruins were looking to embrace the energy of playing on home ice — they're 7-3 at TD Garden during this post-season — while continuing to ride Zdeno Chara and Tim Thomas.

Those two men were both beaten by Alex Burrows before he brought a quick end to overtime in Game 2. Thomas was caught out of his goal as Burrows outraced Chara to score on a wraparound, but the Bruins goalie scoffed at the notion he might want to tone down his aggressive style.

"I have a pretty good idea of how to play goalie," Thomas said yesterday. "I'm not going to be taking suggestions or advice at this time. I'm just going to keep playing the way I have."

There was more than a hint of defiance from the Eastern Conference champions, who clearly feel unlucky to be trailing the series 2-0 after a pair of one-goal losses.

Coach Claude Julien came to the defence of both Thomas and Chara, the towering six-foot-nine defenceman who had a tough outing in Game 2. The Bruins captain is averaging more than 28 minutes per game in the playoffs and shouldn't expect to see that workload eased any.

"Where we are right now, we have to look at it this way: He's got all summer long to rest," said Julien. "Now is not the time to start giving him a rest. We're in a fight here for a Stanley Cup.

"He's capable of taking it."

Julien hinted at needing to make a few small "corrections" before the puck is dropped for Game 3. THE CANADIAN PRESS
